

While we cannot confirm nor deny the existence of an investigation, the FDA takes very seriously any complaints about 510(k) forgeries and device safety issues. The agency is committed to ensuring that patients have access to safe and effective medical devices. To help us achieve our mission, we have established pathways and guidelines that we expect the medical device industry to follow and will take action to protect the public health as appropriate.